TUTORIAL:

Linked from the Web site is an extensive tutorial on using your TROY Library services.

While the guide you are now reading provides a brief overview of selected resources, the online tutorial includes detailed presentations regarding topics such as:

- Using book and journal databases
- Evaluating information sources (books, journals, Web sites, etc.)
- Plagiarism (how students can avoid plagiarizing and how faculty can deter and detect acts of plagiarism)

II. INTERLIBRARY LOAN (ILL)

Books and journal articles that are not available online or at your local library may be requested through Interlibrary Loan (ILL). Interlibrary Loan is a service that allows you to borrow books and photocopies of journal articles.

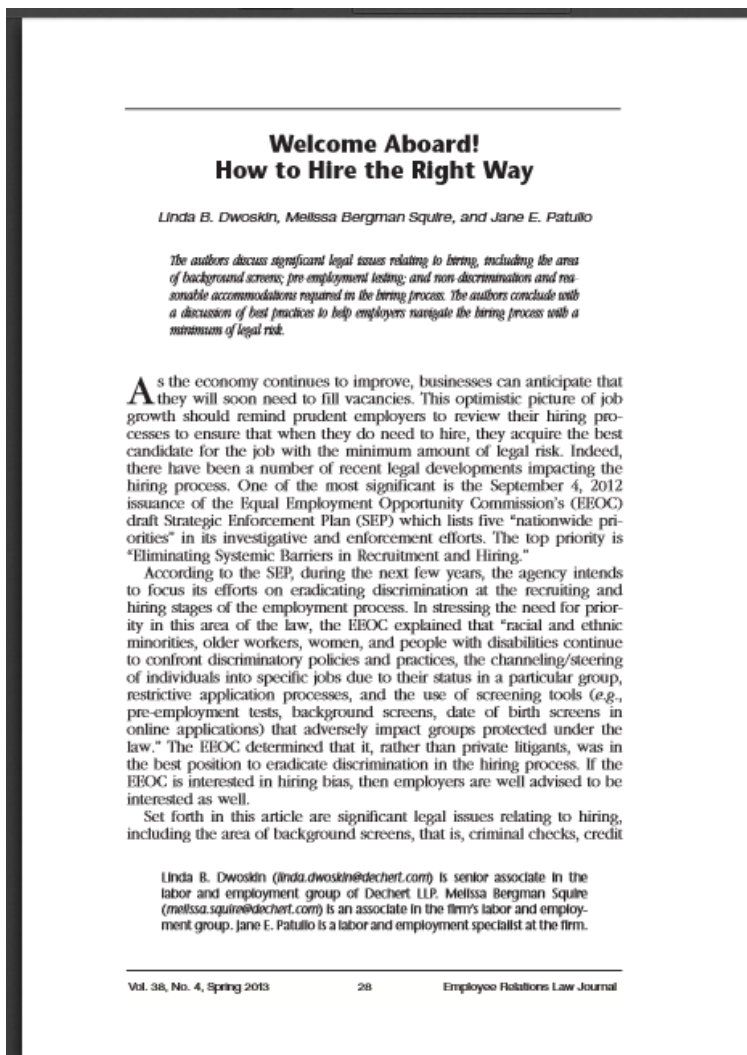

For ILL policies and procedures use the link “Interlibrary Loan (ILL) Policies” on the library home page.

III. JOURNALS

JOURNAL DATABASES

Access to TROY's journal databases is by username and password (your TROY email username/password). Journal databases allow you to look up journal articles on a given topic. Depending on your topic, you may want to use a database with content geared toward fields such as business, criminal justice, sociology, and more. The database listings on the cover page of this guide can assist you in selecting appropriate databases.

Journal databases can be searched individually or they can be searched in groups or in combination with the Library's eBook databases and Library Catalog by means the Search Library Resources search box that appears on the Library home page. To learn more about that, see section VI of this guide.

Choosing databases.

The Business Source Premier database is one of many excellent resources for researching Human Resource Management topics.

Other Human Resources databases are listed on the cover page of this guide.

Section VI of this guide features information on searching multiple databases simultaneously.

A POWERFUL TOOL (for locating the full text of journal articles).

Citation Linker is the name of a very special online tool; one that can be quickly and easily used to find out in which database a particular journal is found. Not all journals are available online—that is where the Library’s Interlibrary Loan service comes in—but Citation Linker can help you locate those journals that are online. Citation Linker is linked on the Library Web site.

III. BOOKS

LIBRARY CATALOG

One of the primary uses of the Library Catalog is to look up print and electronic books owned by the Troy University Library. The catalog can be search by itself or it can be searched in combination with the Library’s eBook databases by means the Search Library Resources search box that appears on the Library home page.

To use the catalog, enter your search terms in the search box and select the appropriate search category (e.g., author, title, or subject). Items located at a Troy University Library that is not near you may be requested through Interlibrary Loan (ILL). ILL for books is available within the United States only (not overseas).

Electronic books (eBooks) that are listed in the catalog can be accessed via the Library’s eBooks databases (discussed, beginning on the next page).

Word or phrase search. This is the default setting for searching the catalog and can be a good way to get started. A word or phrase search will match words you enter with words from a book’s author, title, or subject headings the book is listed under.

Author search. When looking for the writings of an individual, search by author. Enter the author’s last name followed by a comma and then the author’s first name or initial—if any, then select author search.

Title search. To search for works by their title, use title search.

Subject search. When searching for information about a specific topic, select subject search (word or phrase search also works well).

When using the library catalog your best bet is often to start with a small number of key words (even just one word), performing a “word or phrase” search. To get ideas on words to search, one can search for potential subject terms via this Library of Congress Classification (LCC) service <http://id.loc.gov/authorities/subjects.html>. (Materials in the TROY Libraries are organized according to LCC.)

EBOOKS (ELECTRONIC BOOKS)

Access to TROY's eBook databases is by username and password (your TROY email username and password). These information search tools can be accessed through the Library's online databases, which are linked from each of the TROY Libraries Web pages. Electronic books are an effective way for researchers worldwide to have instant access to high-quality materials.

eBook Collection is a large, general database of full-text academic (and non-academic) books, containing over 50,000 titles. The Ebook Library databases contain a growing number of titles, geared to the programs of Troy University. Reference material (traditionally found in reference books) can be accessed via online databases that include Credo Reference and Encyclopaedia Britannica.

Let's do a quick show-and-tell in the eBook Collection database. From the Library home page, select Databases.

Access to databases is limited to currently registered students (as well as TROY faculty and staff). For access to databases, your username is your TROY email user ID, and your password is TROY email password.

V. WRITING

THE WRITING CENTER

The Writing Center's online address is <http://trojan.troy.edu/writingcenter/>. The Writing Center has guides for Research/Documentation, Special Kinds of Writing, Grammar/Mechanics, and The Writing Process. Note that several of its handouts, although not a substitute for the APA Manual, are designed to assist you with American Psychological Association writing style.

DOCUMENTATION

The Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association (6th edition) is the style guide used by the Troy University HRM programs.

One resource that you may find useful is the publication Citing the World Wide Web in Style. This guide assists you in the preparation of references to material you obtain from databases such as those provide by TROY. This publication is available online in the Information and Help section of the Library Web site. Additional guides in that same area include:

- APA-style Running Head and Page Numbers: Using Microsoft Word to Format Your Paper
- Hanging Indents: Using Microsoft Word to Format Your Documentation
- Tips and Tricks for Microsoft Word

VI. SEARCHING MULTIPLE RESOURCES SIMULTANEOUSLY:

Oftentimes you will want to target your research by using a specific database, the Library Catalog, or other online resources, individually. It is a good idea to familiarize yourself with individual resources (e.g., the Business Source Premier database or the Safari books database)—the nature of the information it contains and the way it works.

Some of the Library's database providers (the vendors from which the Library purchases these services) allow you to search more than one database (from that provider) simultaneously. For example, if researching a human resources topic, one could search these databases at the same time: Academic Search Complete, Business Source Premier, and SocINDEX.

In addition to searching multiple databases from a particular vendor, there is the SEARCH LIBRARY RESOURCES box on the Library home page. This interface allows you to search the Library Catalog and nearly all of the Library's book and journal databases simultaneously.

The following information concerns:

Databases from EBSCO Publishing

Databases from the ProQuest company

The all-in-one research tool, Search Library Resources

Databases from the EBSCO Publishing

To search any or all of the following databases at the same time, log in to any one of them (any one) and then click the choose databases link. That will allow you to select additional databases to search.

Databases from the EBSCO Publishing that are most relevant to human resources research:

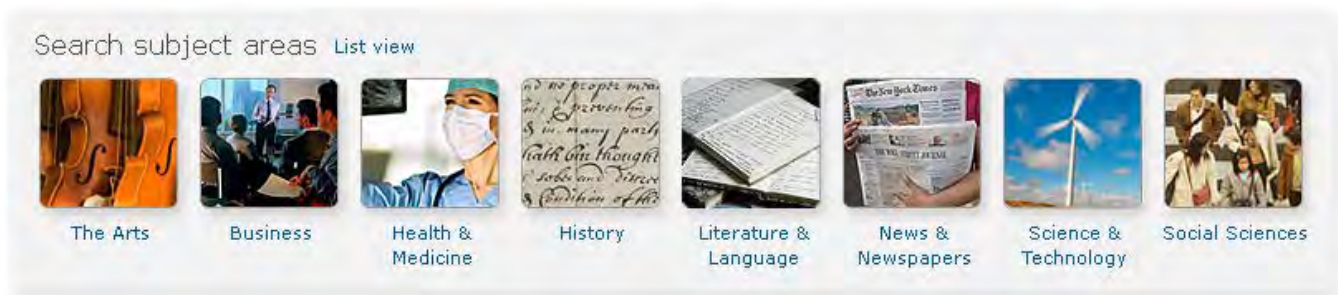

Academic Search Complete
Business Source Premier
eBook Collection
Environment Complete
Military and Government Collection
PsycArticles
PsycInfo
SocINDEX

Databases from the ProQuest company

There are two ways to search multiple databases from the ProQuest company. The first step is the same for each way; log in to the database named ProQuest Central.

If you search the ProQuest Central database you will be searching all of the ProQuest databases the Library has access to—those in the field of business as well as those for art, music, literature, and more. This can be a good way to search, but it may provide too much irrelevant data.

When you log in to the ProQuest Central database, ProQuest will offer to let you search several subject collections of database (pictured below), including collections for Business and Social Sciences, the two main areas in which to research human resources.

The basics of how to use the Search Libraries Resources service

The Search Libraries Resources box is located at the top of the Library home page. Instead of one-stop-researching. Think of it as one-start-researching . . . a way to begin (and then limit) your search.

To begin, simply put in your terms and do the search:

SEARCH LIBRARY RESOURCES

ALL || Catalog || Databases
organizational change Search
More search options

By default the results will be listed in “Relevance” order. You can easily change the order of the results to display them by date. Look to the upper right for those options.

After you get the results list, look to the left side menu in order to tailor the results to your information needs. The following is a quick look at some of the choices.

Items with full text online: Means you can access the materials immediately/electronically.

Limit to articles from peer-reviewed publications: This will do two things; the nature of the information shown will be journal articles (only), and the articles will be from journals that are peer-reviewed (refereed).

Library location: If you want the materials to be online/electronic, use the “Items with full text online,” limiter, as shown above. When you need to get your hands on a print (physical) book or article, then you can use a limiter such as “Montgomery – Circulating materials,” as shown to the right.

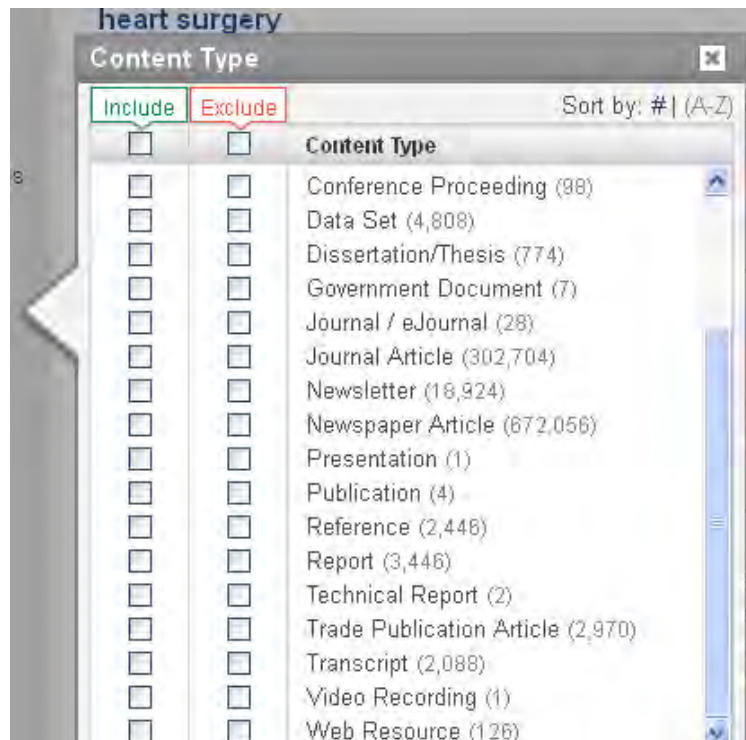

Refine your search

- Items with full text online
- Limit to articles from scholarly publications, including peer-review
- Limit to articles from peer-reviewed publications
- Exclude Newspaper Articles
- Add results beyond your library's collection

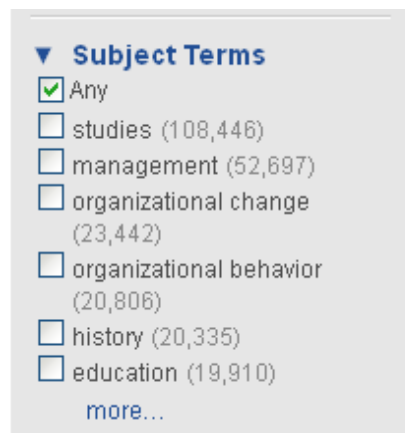

▼ Library Location

- Any
 - Troy - Circulating materials (16,841)
 - Dothan - Circulating materials (6,642)
 - Montgomery - Circulating materials (3,687)
 - Troy - Electronic materials (2,116)
 - Montgomery - Electronic materials (1,767)
 - Dothan - Electronic materials (1,760)
- more...

Content type: Be careful using this limiter (shown below, left). If you are only truly interested in journal articles, then it is probably fine to use the “Journal Article” check box, but before you choose a different limiter, especially “Book / eBook,” we suggest clicking the “more...” link to see all of your choices (partial list shown below).

Subject terms: Take advantage of the power of the search interface to build your search. For example, the search on the term organizational change yielded more than 600,000 results. By checking one or more of the limiters, the search is narrowed to one aspect of the subject. You may not always want to use this type of limiter, but it is good to know it is available.
